

Do You Need a Writing Coach?

If you want to write and publish, but don't know where to begin—or if you want to take your writing to the next level—you might need a writing coach.

With over thirty years in Christian publishing,

Author Judith Couchman coaches nonfiction writers to reach their writing, publishing, and promotional goals. She helps writers to:

- Define a purpose and goals as a nonfiction writer.
- Identify a unique writing brand and tagline.
- Pinpoint viable projects to write for publication.
- Plan articles, blogs, books, and other writing projects.
- Improve writing skills and content organization.
- Receive and implement critiques of writing projects.
- Create promotional materials to support published works.
- Develop an online and social networking presence as a writer.
- Work through challenges about the writing life.

If you're writing nonfiction from a Christian viewpoint, Judith could be the coach for you.

Contact her at judithcouchman@comcast.net or through www.judithcouchman.com.

Judith Couchman is the author of over 40 books, Bible studies, and compilations. She's also contributed to Bible projects, and worked as a book editor, magazine editor, publicist, and teacher. She speaks to groups in the United States and overseas, and teaches online for the University of Colorado at Colorado Springs and the Colorado Community Colleges Online. Judith created Clarity Magazine, the Designing a Woman's Life seminars, and the Write the Vision retreats. Judith holds a B. A. in Education, an M. A. in Journalism, and an M. A. in Art History. She lives in Colorado Springs.